

Wayne State University

Searching for solutions

Researchers at Wayne State University ask questions that matter – and then discover answers that make a difference. Concepts developed in Midtown Detroit are resonating around the world. Health care, industry, education and the environment – all of society is touched by innovation that begins at Wayne State. WSU has a strong partnership with Michigan State University and the University of Michigan through the University Research Corridor, which attracts 93 percent of all federal research funding coming into the state – and uses it to renew our economy. Wayne State spends nearly $254 million each year on research; find out how these dollars make a difference at www.research.wayne.edu.

AIM HIGHER